MR. BLAINE HAS A RELAPSE

FOR HOURS YESTERDAY HIS LIFE WAS DESPAIRED OF.

A Sinking Spell Which Caused Much Alarm-How He Has Been Failing -The Physician's Bulletins -His Condition To-Day.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 9 .- Mr. Blaine has had another relapse, and his condition is most serious. Late Saturday night there was a recurrence of the alarming symptoms which, just three weeks ago, had immediately preceded a sinking spell. It was about midnight that his condition bewho is constantly at his bedside, had Dr. Johnston aroused and hurriedly summoned ohnston arrived at 1 o'clock and found d. Blaine sinking rapidly, and he worked over him for some time before signs of any ecovery became evident. His condition was so alarming that the family fearlooked for the end before dawn fully looked for the end before dawn of the Sabbath morning and remained swake and within immediate call of his bedside all night. The powerful heart restoratives applied by the doctors, which are stated to have been the most potent known to medical science, were successful in rullying and making more steady the feeble and fitful pulsations of the heart, so that by the time the church-goers passed the family residence in Lafayette Square Mr, Blaine's condition was a shade better. He was still, however, so weak and pros-

Mr. Blaine's condition was a shade better. He was still, however, so weak and prostrated that the doctors did not dare to leave him at the same time, fearing that another attack and the final summons might come at any moment. At noon the physicians issued this bulletin:

Yesterday Mr. Blaine lost strength, but last night his weakness became more decided for a few hours, and he seemed in danger of a speedy termination. Since morning, however, he has been somewhat stronger, and at the present moment shows more decided ovidences of rallying. But no great hope can be felt unless the improvement shall become more marked than at present and be continued for hours. His symptoms are connected with an irregular and feeble action of the heart.

Yesterday afternoon and last night the distinguished patient rallied somewhat, but there was no such decided improvement in his condition as to justify the members of his family, all of whom were around his bedside all day, to hope for a permanent recovery.

bedside all day, to hope for a permanent recovery.

The remarkable vitality possessed by Mr. Blaine was shown in the rally he made yesterday evening and last night. At noon or shortly before, it was the general belief shared by members of the family that the distinguished invalid could not recover, but the physicians, hoping against hope, relaxed none of their efforts to prolong his life. And he responded to the remedies and treatment in such a satisfactory manner that toward midnight Dr. Hyat felt justified in returning to his home, where he remained throughout the night. His departure was overlooked by the watchers on the outside, and until this morning it was supposed that the two physicians were in the house. All nightlong the vigil of the press representatives was maintained, but there was no incident to reward their watchfulness nor to break the monotony of the long hours until shortly before 6 o'clock. Then the light in the chamber of the sick man was suddenly turned on full, and in two or three minutes it was again lowered to the point at which it harmed ever since the house was closed signs of activity betokening the end of another day's work. The morning opened dark and murky, and the air was chilly with premoaltions of more snow, and the few early visitors hurried by the house without stopping to inquire of Mr. Blaine's condition. The fact that he was still allve seemed to satisfy them. Inquiries were made at the door by fact that he was still alive seemed to satisfy them. Inquiries were made at the door by the reporter at 8 o'clock and again at 9, and both times the reply was that "Mr. Blaine was resting quite easy, indeed."

One of the oldest friends of the stricken statesman, who was admitted to the sick chamber last night, passed the house this morning and, saluting the watchers, said: "I don't think you will have to keep the vigil much longer. The light of the life of Mr. Blaine is going out, and I do not think he will survive the next twenty-four hours. His present condition is a struggle between existence and the end, which is likely to terminate at any time." likely to terminate at any time.

likely to terminate at any time."

Mr. Blaine in his present condition is apparently oblivious of those around him, but he frequently arouses from the comatose state, and although too weak physically to manifest any interest in the family, yet gives evidence of consciousness. Dr. Hyatt visited the patient about 9 o'clock this morning, and remained an hour or more. At 11 o'clock Dr. Johnston, who had then been with his patient half an hour, said:

"Mr. Blaine is very much better. He is as well as he was four days ago and has entirely recovered from the relapse of Saturday night and yesterday morning. He is quite cheerful this morning, and I feel very much encouraged respecting him."

Shortly before this statement was made Mr. James G. Blaine, Jr., started out for a walk. He repeated substantially what Dr.

manner that he felt greatly relieved. Several callers who were seen after they had left the house stated that the members of the family were much encouraged over the developments of the morning, and spoke quite hopefully of the issue. Among those who were at the house was Secretary Elkins, who remained some time.

A warm personal friend of Mr. Blaine, and one who has access to what transpires in the sick-room, said to-day: "Mr. Blaine has not had a connected thought for thirty days past. The heart, while nourishing the days past. The heart, while nourishing the organs, has not been strong enough to furnish the necessary blood for the brain. Hence it is that, like the ancient pine, Mr. Blaine has been slowly perishing at the top. But Mr. Blaine dies like a philosopher at last, distasteful as the subject of death has been to him in other and stronger days. A few weeks since he called his family about him and calmly told them that he did not expect to recover. He was in full possession of his mental faculties, and went over his affairs in detail, and said to his children all that he had to say. In the intervening period the members of the family have gradually become reconciled to the days past. The heart, while nourishing th one of its interesting chapters. No one ex-cept the inmates of the family are able to appreciate her fidelity, and watchfulness, and courage, Ms. Blaine remained at the hedside of her husband almost unintermittingly, watching eyery indication of change, and acting promptly in every case of emergency. Through all the stages of despondence and grief which Mr. Blaine has passed of late she has been at his side to cheer, and soothe, and strengthen him.

Mr. Tingle, speaking about the Cabinet, said: "Carlisle for the Treasury and ex-Congressman Collins for the War Department are, I think, the only two Cabinet positions virtually filled. No one, except Mr. Whitney, perhaps, will know the composition of the Cabinet before it is announced, although Senator Gorman, who is consulted a good deal, may learn who is selected."

The North Dakota Senatorship. BISMARCK, N. D., January 9 .- A private dispatch from Washington announces that ex-Governor Oddway has concluded not to come here and make a fight for the senatorship. One of his friends in the Legislature made a canvass of the members and discovered that he could not secure more than six otes, and that a trip to this market would be wholly useless. The friends of Senator Casey are jubilant, and announce that they have twenty-five votes pledged already, and that the Senator will certainly be nomi-nated in caucus. It is not believed, how-ever, that there will be any caucus. Only the supporters of Casey and Kingman want a caucus, and they are admitted to lack many votes of a majority of the whole Legislature.

"What was the meaning of the brief illumination?" the watchers anxiously inquired of each other. Various speculations were indulged in, but none of them were correct, as subsequent events proved. In a minute or two Dr. Johnston appeared and was intercepted by a reporter. He said: "Mr. Blaine has passed a peaceful night. It was very like that of a well man. He has been awake only when it was necessary to give him medicine or nourishment."

Shortly after this hour (6 lock a.m.) the front of the house was opened, and ligan was descending with a wheelbarrow under an iron ore elevator it dropped. GRAY FOR A CABINET PLACE.

HIS "BOOM" NOT CONSIDERED FORMIDABLE AT WASHINGTON.

How Vorhees and Bynum Regard It-Congressman Martin's Civil Service Bill - Opposition to Chandler's Bill - Washington News.

(Special to The Indianapolis News.) WASHINGTON, D. C., January 9.-There s a perceptible want of animation in ex-Governor Gray's Cabinet boom. Nobody eems to be interested in it around Washington. While Senators and Representatives from other States stand about the corridors and shout for their respective favorites, the Gray boom is making either a still hunt or no hunt at all. Congressman Bynum was asked yesterday if ex-Governor Gray would go into the Cabinet. "I don't know," was the reply.

"Is any particular effort being made in his behalf among the Indiana delegation?" "Not that I know of." "Is the delegation unanimously in favor of the ex-Governor?" "I think it is," he replied. "I believe that there is a general sentiment among Indiana Democrats that ex-Governor Gray should be given a Cabinet place, but I am not sure that he will get it."

Senator Voorhees says without hesitation that he is in favor of ex-Governor Gray for a choice Cabinet plum, and will use every effort he can to secure the Hoosier statesman a seat of honor at the

The latest Cabinet slates leave out the ex-Governor's name entirely. The word comes from New York that Mr. Whitney is making a gallant fight in favor of the Indiana leader and has been heard to say that it would be a shame to ignore Mr. Gray in the make-up of the Cabinet. One of Mr. Gray's Indiana friends said:

"There is no occasion for a brass band campaign in the interest of Isaac P. Gray. He is not the sort of a man who goes hunting for office with a blare of trumpets, and he would not permit his friends to bear down on Mr. Cleveland in a body and annoy him by too much solicitation. It is my opinion that ex-Governor Gray will be called into the Cabinet. I don't believe that there has been a day since the election when his name was left out of the calculations of the Presidentelect for the new Cabinet. A Cabinet place is properly due Indiana. I don't see the political expediency of going to Illi-nois for a member of the Cabinet when that State has the Vice-Presidency."

Dickinson For Secretary of State. Mr. Cleveland is said to be strongly arging Don M. Dickinson to become Secretary of State, and some of the latter's friends believe that the Michigan man will accept. Mr. Carlisle has undoubtedly accepted the Treasury portfolio. In addition to his appointment, two other Cabinet places will probably go to the South. One of these will certainly go to Georgia. It seems to be reasonably certain that Mr. Blount will be Postmaster-General. Mr. Martin's Civil Service Bill.

No piece of legislation proposed since the holidays has excited the interest of the poli-ticians so much as the bill introduced by Congressman Martin, of Indiana, to limit the tenure of Federal appointees in the civil service. In Washington the bill has a particular interest for the numerous Government clerks who have grown gray in the service under the sheltering arm of the civil service law. Mr. Martin's bill puts the Government employe who is under the civil service on the same basis with the President of the United States in the matter of official tenure. places the limit of holding office under civil service appointment at eight years. The bill provides that after having passed an examination and been installed into office under the civil service rules, an appointee may hold four years, and be entitled to promotions during that time. At the expiration of the four years, such a Government emplove may take another examination and enter the service again at the foot of the ladder, as any new appointee would, and fight for promotion for four years more. after that time he shall be disqualified from again entering the civil service. Should the bill be enacted into law it will play havor with a number of clerks who are now in office, for it provides that clerks now holding office under the civil service regulations shall have the time which they have already served deducted from the eight years' tenure. The concluding clause of the bill provides:

That any person now holding any such position who has held the same already for a period of eight years or more shall not be eligible to longer hold after July 4, 1863.

"My object in presenting this bill," said Mr. Martin to THE NEWS correspondent, "is to open a field for deserving men and women all over the country. I am a believer in rotation in office. I have talked with a number of Senators and Congressmen, and I find they are in sympathy with the bill and anxious to see it become a law. For years there has been a corps of office-holders in the civil service, who have been drawing good salaries and living lives of inactivity nd ease to the exclusion of many worthy aspirants. In the course of time, under the operation of the present civil service rules, we shall have an in ice rules, we shall office - holding aristocracy country which nothing but death or the increased needs of the Government can change. I think eight years is long enough for any man to serve as a Government clerk. If at that time he has no ambition to go higher, he should make way for other young men and women who are seeking places in the Government service."

Mr. Martin's bill has been discussed with much interest among the Democratic Congressmen, and it promises to be a subject of lively discussion in the House before the service advocates and the Government

To Repeal the Sherman Law, The banking and currency committee of the House met to-day to begin work on a bill to repeal the Sherman law. The work of preparing such a bill really belongs to the committee on coinage, weights and measures, but as Mr. Bland, an ultra free coinage man, is chairman of that committee, and opposed to the repeal of the Sherman law it was deemed best by Mr. Cleveland and his congressional friends who are interested in repealing the law, to have the bill reported from the banking and currency committee, of which Mr. Bacon of New York, who represents President-elect Cleveland's coinage views, is chairman.

Congressman Taylor, of Illinois, leader of the minority of the committee on coinage, weights and measures, says: "No bill repealing the Sherman law can pass this House. I believe the bill can be defeated outright, but if it can not be defented it can be killed some way. The Republicans will be almost unanimously opposed to repeal-ing the law. Opposing Chandler's Militia Bill. WASHINGTON, D. C., January 9 .- Considerable opposition has been aroused against the bill recently introduced by Senator Chandler, which in its effects makes practically unlawful all independent military organizations in the United States not connected with the National Guards. The regular State militia organizations favor the bill, as they have always resented the assumption of social superiority of the in-dependent organizations. While the bill is carnestly advocated by the Mational Guard, almost every large city in the United States has its crack military organization, not-connected with the National Guard, and they will doubtless oppose the bill at every stage. Arrangements are making by the National Rifles of this site open of the indexed at the stage. this city, one of the independent organizations, to appear before the Senate military committee and oppose the bill in its present shape, and it is probable that the friends of the respective independent organizations in other cities will unite in opposition to the passage of the measure unless amended.

[Special to The Indianapolis News.] WASHINGTON. January 9 .- Lieut. Chas. M. Terrill, of the Department of Texas, was promoted to-day by the President to be colonel and assistant paymaster. The appointment was a pleasant surprise to the Hoosiers here. It was known that Lieut. Terrill sought the appointment two years ago. THE SENATORIAL CANDIDATES. One Vote For Shanklin in the Cau-Turpie's Certainty.

Only one vote is expected in the Democratic senatorial caucus against the renomination of David Turple. That one will be the vote of Francis T. Hord, of the Marion county delegation. Soon after the election Mr. that he was for John Gilbert Shanklin, of Evansville, and although Mr. Shanklin has declined to become a candidate, Mr. Hord has not departed from his determination to support in the caucus. Mr. Hord will abide by the caucus decision and support Mr. Turpie when the election takes place. There is no doubt about the re-election of Senator Turbut the Indianapolis friends of Mr. Shanklin say that if he would consent to contest the nomination with the Senator he would bring on an interesting fight. It is said that the majority of the members from Marion county would be glad to support Shanklin if he would allow the use of his name, but the delegation was instructed for Turpie. Senator Turpie is still in Indianapolis, and it is understood that he will remain here until the election is held. He has talked with the Democratic leaders of both Houses at his residence, and Saturday night met several of his friends of the General Assembly at the Bates.

Houses at his residence, and Saturday night met several of his friends of the General Assembly at the Bates.

In connection with the senatorial race there is gossip to the effect that the friends of Turpie have been shrewdly leading ex-Governor Gray to believe that his chances for a place in Cleveland's Cabinet are first-class. There are Democrats who believe that this scheme has been worked from Washinington for all it is worth. Turpie, it is said, has feared Gray all along much more than he has Shanklin, because he has the promise of Shanklin that he [Shanklin] will not be a candidate. "You will notice," said a Democratic member of the Senate to-day, "that after Turpie is re-elected there will not be so much talk about the flattering chances of Mr. Gray for a position in the Cabinet."

On the other hand, there are Democrats who believe that the fact that Gray has not entered the senatorial race, is the best proof at hand that he has been promised something by Cleveland. They say that if Gray had not been assured that he would be cared for by the President he would have contested the senatorship with Mr. Turpie.

After wrestling with the question Saturday and most of yesterday the Democratic members of the committee decided to leave the matter to a caucus of the Democratic members of the committee, through Chairman Cullop, reported that they had decided to recommend the appointment of twenty assistant doorkeepers and sixteen assistant clerks. The report was adopted, but not without opposition. Twenty-six members veted against the appointment of so many doorkeepers, and it is possible that these twenty-six may not abide by the decision of the caucus, but may join with the Republicans in cutting down the number of doorkeepers, It was also decided by the Democratic caucus that the pay of the assistant doorkeepers and assistant clerks shall be $5 a day each.

The Republicans, as soon as they learned that the Democrats were caucusing, went into hiding to also consider the question of employes. It was the unanimous vote of the caucus that the minority oppose any effort to increase the number of employes over that fixed by statute. It was decided not to object to the five-dollar-a-day pay of efficient clerks and doorkeepers.

Ceremonies In the Corridors of the Capitol This Afternoon In the Presence of the Legislature.

Governor-Elect Matthews Commends the Tax Law, Opposes a Constitutional Convention, Takes a Stand On the Monument and Other Questions.

Claude Matthews was inaugurated Gover-nor and Mortimer Nye Lieutenant-Governor of Indiana this afternoon. The opremonies were appointed for 1:30 o'clock, but it was later than that hour before they took place. The south corridor of the Capitol was the scene of the inauguration, and a distinguished ody of men and women collected as spec tators. The corridors upstairs and down, stairways and other places in the Capitol afforded fine field of observation.

The decorations were imposing in their simplicity. On either side of the dome beneath the skylights the courts were resplend-ent with the national colors, the bunting ing suspended from above in many beautiful folds. On the upper floor the flags were of the largest pattern, while those below were more numerous though somewhat smaller. Some of the columns were also gracefully twined with red, white gracefully twined with red, white and blue. The two courts were draped alike with the exception that the one south of the dome, where the inaugural ceremonial took place, bore the additional decoration of the State seal displayed on a large silken banner of blue. This was suspended directly above the platform and showed to the best advantage the retreating buffale and the vigorous woodman plying his ax.

Senate and House Meet and Arrange To March To the Inauguration.

Prior to the inauguration the two Houses met separately for a few minutes. The Senate was called to order at 1:40 p. m. The president of the Senate announced that it was in order for the Senate to proceed to the place of inaugural, the body to be met in the corridor by the members of the House, the Senators to return to the chamber after the inauguration ceremonies. The doorkeepers then arranged the members by twos and proceeded to the corridor to meet the House.

The House did not meet until 1:30. It had just been called to order when the doorkeeper of the Senate appeared and andoorkeeper of the Senate appeared and announced that the Senate was waiting in the corridor to join the House. The members of the House arose, and, forming by twos, marched to the corridor and took place in line in the rear of the Senators. The band, which had been stationed on the second floor, began to play, and the Senators and Expresentatives marched north along the second-floor corridor and down stairs to the seats prepared for the members of the two seats prepared for the members of the two Houses in the corridors under the skylight.

President Griffith called the joint convention to order and prayer was offered by Rev. Joseph A. Milburn, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, of this city. There were noises about the corridors, talking and moving of feet upon the tiles, which prevented the hearing of the prayer by those of the audience who were at any distance. He prayed for a blessing upon the people and the State and upon those who were to take up the great duties to which they had been called.

The roll of Senators and Representatives was then called, Roll Clerk Waltz calling the Senators and Acting Chief Clerk Newkirk the Representatives. GOVERNOR MATTHEWS'S ADDRESS.
Gentlemen of the Senaic and House of Representatives: It is with a deep feeling of the sacred responsibilities of the oath I have just taken that I assume the duties of the office of Governor of Indiana, and I desire to return to the people of our State, through you, their legislative representatives, my profound gratitude for the honor, and my earnest assurances that it shall be my constant aim and effort to faithfully execute and discharge the duties of this high office in accordance with the constitution and their wishes, as these may be expressed or fairly inferred from time to time through current events.

and their wishes, as these may be expressed or fairly inferred from time to time through current events.

The results of the recent election, in my judgment, clearly indicate that the people desire that greater economy should be practiced in administering the government, both National and State, and that taxation should not only be lessened, but be more equitably distributed.

TAX LAW.

It is an undeniable fact that, in the years recently passed, there has been a growing tendency in legislation to too greatly flavor corporations and monopolies at the expense of the farmers, the labor ers and the business classes, who make up the great body of our citizens. Under this common belief, the people became restless, and desired that this inequality should be remedied, and no longer exist.

In obedience to this well-expressed opinion, a law was wisely passed by the last Legislature, the intention of which was to secure fuller and fairer assessments of property for taxable purposes in this State.

The law has worked well, and I believe will meet this intention, so far as the assessment of the property of private citizens would seem to be wise to give this part of the law as it is at least a fair trial. The introduction of any unusual, exactions and unjust method of assessing the property of private citizens would tend to make railroad corporations of the constitution.

Under this common bellef, the people became restless, and desired that this inequality should be remedied, and no longer exist.

In obedience to this well-expressed opinion, a law was wisely passed by the last Legislature, the intention of which was to secure fuller and fairer assessments of property for taxable purposes in this State.

This law has worked well, and I believe will meet this intention, so far as the assessment of the property of private citizens is concerned, and it would seem to be wise to give this part of the law as it is at least a fair trial.

The introduction of any unusual, vexatious and unjust method of assessing the property of private citizens would tend to make the law unpopular, and would be unfortunate.

The plain and emphatic language of the constitution is that "taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State." The tax law adopted by the last Legislature and crading a State Board of Tax Commissioners, clearly intended to make railroid corporations of the State shape their just proportion of the taxes.

The persistent efforts of some of the representatives of these corporations, not only to evade and resist the law, but to defeat persons at the elections because they had honeadly and faithfully endeavored to enforce it, show that every just and proper means should be used to make these corporations perform their duty to the State; and I would favor such amendment to this law as may be needed to secure that result. Aside from this, with a few clearer intentions and corporations and not in the course that a such a secure that result. consistencies. I would not suggest that the general system of this law be tampered with.

RULDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS.

There has been a wide departure from the original laws creating building, loan and saving associations. Instead of remaining true to the original intent, a means of furnishing a safe investment for the saving and security of weekly and monthly wages of certain classes of our citizens, thereby encouraging the building and ownership of homes, these have now drifted into banking and brokerage institutions and lenders of money upon a large and dangerous scale.

The most serious source of evil is the evasion of just payment of taxes on money loaned, drawing regular rates of inferest, through what is known as "paid-up shares," and often adding features of insurance not at first intended, nor legitimately a part of these associations. Some restrictions should be thrown around foreign building and loan associations, not incorporated under the laws of this State, but transacting business with the same freedom granted other associations complying with our laws. I, therefore, make mention of this to you, gentlemen, as worthy your careful consideration.

REDUCTION IN TAXES.

It is undoubtedly true that for many years there has been a growing extravagance in national, State and local governments. This is an entire departure from correct principles, and the people, who have the taxes to pay, navewisely called a half to the march of this growing evil.

A correct idea of this has come down to us from olden times, hallowed by age, and sanc-

Our present election laws seem to be working well, and if changed at all it should be done with the greatest caution. Indeed, I am fully persuaded that it would best serve the public interest to allow the people to become fully acquainted with and accustomed to its provisions, and the system to become theroughly established, before changes are made; new provisions adopted, or old ones changed, in however a slight degree, have a tendency to cause confusion and doubt in the mind of the voter that embarrasses him in the free exercise of

The soldiers of no one war, brave and patriotic as they were, have a monopoly of Indiana's valor and military glory, and such great historical events as the capture of Vincennes from the British, the battle of Tippecance and the war with Mexico (the first two on Indianasel), and all productive of vast benefits to the country) should not be entirely ignored in the construction of an Indiana State monument.

If the present criminal laws are not sufficient to cover such offenses, they should be made more effective by further enactments.

Herdman on Trial.

Harry H. Herdman was placed on trial before Judge Baker in the Federal Court this morning charged with using the mails for a fraudulent purpose. Herdman was acount by the postofine authorities for months before he was captured here. He was arrested last May for assaulting his wife, who was dying 'of consumption. In his valies were found a number of papers and letters that are now being used as evidence against him. After his arrest he was indicated in Missouri, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Pennsylvania for offenses similar to the one charged in the present case. It is charged that Herdman, under thewames of Hanson, Morrison, Stewart and others, ran a fictitious collection agency called the American Credit Company. Dr. Curtis, a Congregational minister, read a paper or "The Bible as a Source of Pulpit Fawer." The greatest study of mankind, said Dr. Curtis, was the study of man under the influence of the divine spirit. Preachers must not only know the texts of the Bible, but they must have its spirit and its tone. The man in the pulpit, not the Bible, is responsible for a cowed feeling in the congregation toward God, if such a feeling exists. There is no virtue in despair; no religion in gloom. In the discussion which followed, the views presented by the paper and the style of the writer were highly commended by nearly all who took part. At the next meeting there will be a book review by the Rev. W. A. Hendrickson.

INDIANA..

We may indeed feel justly proud of our State, for it possesses in an eminent de greeall the elements necessary to the greatest prosperity and the highest civilization. With the great takes on the north and the Ohio river on the south, it has for commercial purposes the benefit of both, and a geographical position which makes it necessary that nearly all the leading trunk lines of railways should pass over its surface.

It has a soil of unsurpassed fertility; an equable climate; remarkably free from cyclones and storms; rain in well-measured proportions; hardwood of the highest quality; unlimited quarries of the choicest building stone; vast mines of coal, kaolin and fire clay; a wondeful field, of natural gas, and oil which is flowing from hundreds of wells, and adding to the comfort, the wealth and the prosperity of our people.

without the maturest deliberation and the gravest consideration.

Bad legislation is worse than no legislation. There is often a feeling with legislators that they must do something, and in the multiplicity of bills introduced, there is always danger that some may contain provisions that, if passed, would bring injury alike to the country and ultimately to their authors and supporters. It behooves us all to closely and

I favor the most rigid economy consistent with good government in all departments of with good government in all departments of State, of the members of the United States Senate.

The proposed constitutional amendment having this for its object, is worthy of careful farnest and timely consideration.

The foundation of all true prosperity and wealth rest more largely upon agriculture than any other interest that engages the attention of our citizens. It should be the duty to encourage and foster this, and hold to a careful avoidance of placing any additional burdens upon this interest. For in its prosperity rests the common prosperity of all.

No class of our citizens are more directly interested and benefited in the improvement of our highways than are the farmers and upon none will fall so heavily the costs of construction.

The old law has many valuable features that commend themselves to the people, and is not a bad law if properly enforced. The people themselves are responsible largely for its deficiencies, owing to the laxity in its enforcement.

The supervisors under the old law come directly from the people, and are what the people—their neighbors—make them. The duty and power of apportioning Senators and Representatives among the several counties of the State is conferred by our constitution upon the General Assembly. No other department of the State, government is given any share or part in this function.

The Legislature, five-sixths of which is chosen every two years, directly by popular vote, is nearer the people than any other department, and is therefore properly charged with the performance of this duty.

The people view with great jealousy any attempt made by the courts to encroach upon a province so peculiarly within the scope of legislative action. The manner or mode of apportionment in Indiana is not new; it has been the same under all administrations and after the usage of half a century, the legislation of our State ought not to be imperiled or disturbed by an alleged judicial construction; novel and unprecedented; whereby the judiciary branch of the Government may virtually control the right of representation, and deprive the representatives of the people of their constitutional authority.

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

The present year will witness the assembling in our midst of a great concourse of citizens of this and sister States.

The national encampment, composed of the surviving members of that great army that thirty years ago marched bravely forth to battle at their country's call, will meet the coming fall at your capital city. Year by year their ranks are thinning out, and in the not distant future their ears will be deaf to the bugle call. distant future teach bugle call.

It has been deemed the duty of the citizens wherever they have met to do them honor and give to them a hearty welcome. I trust that Indiana and the city of Indianapolis may not be found wanting in this respect.

They come now with that same broad, generous patriotism that called them forth years ago, to pay a tribute to the bravery and patriotism of Indiana's soldiers, in the shadow of the grandest monument of its kind erected in alf-en isad. in all-sur land.

Provision should be made for the proper completion of the Soldiers and Sallors' Monument. It is a great work, in which every citizen of Indiana has an interest. It is the monument of the State, paid for by all the taxpayers of the State, and constructed under the supervision of commissioners appointed by State authority. No outside influence should be allowed to interfere with its construction, bravely, and with an earnest purpose to dis-charge these duties in a manly and unselfish manner, and to the utmost of our several abilities.

Recent Legislatures have done much to crown our State with the glory of placing her in the foremost rank of leadership in the adoption of great reform measures. I trust your work may be equal to any that has gone before.

The Lieutenant-Governor's Address. After Governor Matthews had spoken Lieutenant-Governor Mortimer Nye took the oath of office, administered by Judge McCabe, of the Supreme Court, and spoke as follows: LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR NYE'S ADDRESS.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives of Indiana.

Ladies and Gentlemen — At this time I appreciate most keenly the great responsibility resting upon me to discharge the duties of the office of Lieutenant Governor in such a manner as to meet your approval and indorsement. My duty is to preside over the sessions of the Senate and make such rulings on parliamentary questions as shall from time to time arise. I earnestly hope that those of a difficult character may not be presented for a few days, when, I trust, I shall be prepared to meet them as they appear. I fear, however, meet them as they appear. I fear, however, that because of inexperience it may be somewhat difficult for me to discharge that duty fully and properly, but I shall endeavor to do so without fear or favor and strictly in conformity with the rules which may be adopted for the business transactions of the present session of the Sena's.

In order that I may not make any serious mistake in the discharge of my official duty I most earnestly invite each and every Senator to give me his cordial support and assistance, and to regard charitably any blunder or error which I may make. It is not within the scope of my duty nor is it proper that I should make any suggestion in relation to any special legislation. In such matters I have no voice or vote. It is for the members of the Senate to present such resolutions or bills as they may deem proper, and for the Senate as a body to adopt or reject them. It seems to me fitting, however, to suggest that the people of this State expect much of the present General Assembly. They hope for general reform and lower taxation, and will not be content unless their hopes are realized. They demand whole-some legislation in the interests of the whole people; and do not expect class legislation of any kind whatever.

The business and legislation of this session is entirely under your control. Each member should, therefore, act according to his own best judgment and be honest and conscientions in the discharge of every duty. It is of the utmost importance that the most intimate and friendly relations should exist between the Senators and the presiding officer. I, therefore, most cordially invite you all to come to me at any time when you may feel that I can be of service to you and I will do all I can to aid you.

I trust the present session of the General Assembly may be a pleasant, agreeable and profitable one, and that all laws and measures adopted by you may meet the most hearty approval of the people of the great State of Indians.

It was during the agitation af the Edmunds law, and although the prophet did not say a dozen words, a column and a half-was made out of the interview. Among his chief recommendations for the private secretaryship to Governor Porter was his remarkable memory for names and faces. It is claimed that the name and the face of a man is never forgotten by Mr. Roberts after he is introduced, and his memory in this respect has given him a broad acquaintance in Indiana and over the country.

"I am glad of the change which my retirement brings to me," he said. "There is no fun in being private secretary to the Governor of Indiana. The first duties to be learned are patience and to become a

Then it requires some tact to give interested attention to the many office-seekers, and altogether there is much restraint necessary in the distinct of the duties o essary in the discharge of the duties of the position. Under Governor Porter I was given a thorough training. I had previously heen in the office of Secretary of State and the Department of Public Instruction, but it was under Governor Porter that I learned to be the most careful. The Governor was to be the most careful. The Governor was a most precise man in all things, and whatever I did for him had to be absolutely correct. He never complained of anything which went wrong, but pointed out the mistakes with the tenderest diplomacy. Few public men have shown greater kindness to young men than ex-Governor Porter. While he was Governor I never saw him angree exercises.

ter. While he was Governor I never saw him angry except once. That was when another official tried to interfere with the carrying out of a death sentence which the Governor refused to commute."

Speaking of his service with Governor Hovey, Mr. Roberts said: "I did not know nor had I ever seen Governor Hovey until after he had been elected, when he appointed me his private secretary. Like Governor Porter, he had a great fondness for young men. Although much my senior, I enjoyed his company in preference to those young men. Although much my senior, I enjoyed his company in preference to those of my own age. I seldom failed to call upon him in the evening, when he talked of private and public matters, and then would generally follow several poetic renditions, as he was familiar with the writers of both prose and poetry. Few knew how well he prose and poetry. Few knew how well he could recite, and often in my feeble efforts before him he was quick to observe slight errors, which he could point out and with-

"What part of his life did Governor Hovey take the most interest in?"

"Of the time he was circuit judge, while yet a young man, he felt the greatest pride, although he looked upon his military career with just satisfaction. But in that conflict he fought with little thought whether he would gain distinction or not.
His ambition was never vaulting and he His ambition was never vaulting and he would never seek position. He had an inborn modesty which never left him. He was generous to a fault, but never gave alms before men. He was one of the most polite men that I ever knew. He always said 'no' with a big N, and that ended the matter, but next day, should he be shown his error, he would change his decision. In the great contest which he decision. In the great contest which he had with the Democratic Legislature he was thoroughly argused, and when the Supreme Court accided against him Supreme Court accided against him in some of the cases his conviction in the correctness of his position was not shaken. Now it is proposed to give back those rights which were taken from the Governor at that time. Governor Hovey found his greatest diversion in the theater, which he attended two and three times a week. He was extremely fond of novels and the magazines were always given a careful perusal. He neither smoked nor chewed tobacco. When in good health he attended tobacco. When in good health he attended church every Sunday,"
"How have you got along with Governor Chare"

"We have been comrades in every way. The Governor never gets very angry at any one, but I believe I thoroughly aroused his wrath once. One night during the late campaign I went to Zionsville to have a private talk on the political outlook. The Governor afterward went down form to make a speech afterward went down town to make a speech while I was entertained by some young folks. We intended to return home at midnight, but after the speaking was over the night, but after the speaking was over the Governor learned that a freight train was at the depot which would carry him to Indianapolis. He left me behind without my knowledge, and laughed nearly all the way to the city over the joke he had played on me. When he reached the State House he went to his private room to active her had be learned. private room to retire, but he had no key to unlock the door. He carefully searched his pockets, and then it occurred to him that I had the key. The door was too strong to be broken open, and he called the night-watchman, who "boosted' him through the transom and early next through the transom, and early next morning he climbed out at the same openmorning he climbed out at the same open-ing. There was a campaign picture which the newspapers missed. I did not see the Governor for several days after when his Christian spirit brought me full forgive-ness. MONDAY, JANUARY 9, 1893.

SENATOR VOORHEES AND SPOILS. SENATOR VOORHEES, if correctly reported, has graciously condescended to declare that old-soldier postmasters in Indiana whose terms expire within a year or so after the new administration begins, will be allowed to finish their terms unless charges tained against them. It is interesting to point out what this brief announcement postoffices of the State are pure spoils; that they are to be distributed among the matter of course; that no other possible thing is to be thought of; that the question ing to do with the case; that if he is a Republican he is to go because he is a kinds of business in that it is not to be run on business principles, but on partisan principles; that no practical man thinks of it in any other way.

Secondly. It is quietly assumed that these spoils are the perquisite of the Senators of this State, or of the Senators and Representatives. Of course, there is no warrant in constitution and law for this assumption. The executive appoints the officers, with the advice and consent of the Senate, in the more important cases. The real responsibility is there. But no hint of this lurks in the reported remarks of our senior Senator. He appears there as the lord of the manor, the fountain of authority, the dispenser of of one who is master in his own right. pleaseth. What Mr. Cleveland's views or policy in the premises may be does not behoof of their employers. enter into onr Senator's consideration. For all that appears in the reported remarks, the incoming President is not to be "in it," so far as regards the disposition of the spoils in this State. The spoils belong to the Senators and Democratic Congressmen-belong to them by natural or divine right, and they propose to stand no nonsense in the bestowal thereof.

Thirdly. It is implied that in the natural course of events all postmasters, no would at once be retired whether their four years term of office had expired or had only just begun. That would be the natural thing-the thing to be expected in all eases. But the lord of the manor will condescend of his grace to make an exception. Postmasters who are old soldiers will be "allowed" to fill out their unexpired terms, provided there is only a year or so left, and provided that they are competent and honest. Doubtless the weakness, as a yielding to an unreasonable prejudice, as an almost foolish relaxation of the strict rules of the game. What masters in Indiana when there is a Democratic President in the White Honse? Of course they have none; but we will not be tor abrupt with old soldiers, even though they are Republicans, who may chance to be competent and honest,—we of course being the arbiters of the competency and honesty. We would fain believe that Senator

Voorhees has been incorrectly reported. But we must confess that there is no good reason in the nature of things to doubt the accuracy of the remarks with which he is credited. They exactly reflect the tone and temper displayed by the Indiana congressional delegation ever since the result of the election was known. Congressman this has adopted such a plan for appointing postmasters in his district, has been reported one day; and Congressman that has decided so and so in regard to the offices in his district, has been heralded next; while the next we have read; Mr. Bynum has conceded the appointment of the Indianapolis postmaster to Senator Turpie." And so it has gone. Every Democratic Congressman has thus numed that the offices are spoils and that the spoils are his. With this attitude of mind the reported words of Senator Voorhees are in complete accord.

Further evidence of the hopelessly inored character of the speils idea in In-In the Eleventh district, has introduced a bill providing that the term of all persons appointed to offices under the United States shall be for four years, whether under civil service or otherwise; that no person is to be eligible to hold office for more than eight years, and that all persons who have held office for this length of time or longer are not eligilength of time or longer are not eligi-

THE MONUMENT COMMISSIONERS'

THE report of the Soldiers' Monument Commission, which THE NEWS gave substantially in full on Saturday, disposes of the pretense put forward by the professional ex-soldiers so thoroughly, that really no further word seems necessary. Coming after Governor Chase's plea that the monument shall be so broad in its expression, and meaning that every citizen in the State shall feel it to be his, and so make it a guarantee for the future, it ought to be accepted as the last word on the subject. It is a complete vindication, not merely of such a broad conception for the monument, but a complete the name of the writer; not necessarily for demonstration of the consistency of the publication, but as an evidence of good faith. commissioners from the first. Incidentally the report shows that the amount of money contributed by the G. A. R. to the monument was only a little more than two thousand dollars. This whole episode post or through telephone No. 161. Where has, perhaps, served a wise purpose. It has demonstrated who attempted to build this monument, and who is building it. It has demonstrated where the money has come from. It has emphasized the great and commendable spirit that animates this State undertaking. It has expounded the wisdom and diligence of the commissioners whom the State has chosen to carry on the work. President Langsdale's report should be read by every thoughtful citizen in the State. As we said, it completely demolishes the egotistical and greedy attempt to capture the State's monument, and sets before the world the nobility of the scheme and the magnitude of the work which Indiana has undertaken to commemorate the valor of her sons.

A NOTE OF ALARM IN REGARD TO

COOKING. A CULINARY academy has been formed by the head cooks of Paris. There are thirty immortals in its membership; the president is one of the most famous cooks in of dishonesty or incompetency are sus- the city of gourmets. At this distance one is not disposed to take much stock in their melancholy plaint. Possibly they met on a day when salads were unsucessful and patrons difficult to please. And yet if there be a real foundation for this illhumor, it might possibly be traced to an uprising against the rich compounds which have long tempted the world under the name of French cooking. If Paris be turning against her own cooks, may not

At the city of Washington eating has become a dissipation; at all metropolitan centers one hears new dishes talked about with interest, if not reverence. The man who is known to his friends for his judgnent in ordering a dinner takes rank with his brother bon vivant who is skilled in the manipulation of the chafing-dish. It not infrequently happens, as a result of this sybaritic tendency, that we hear of men dying from too great indulgence at the table. Suicide by this process is slow matter what their qualifications may be, but certain. Sydney Smith's lines might be changed for the modern sybarite:

Now Death may take me-I have dined to-day.

It is not possible to judge how much good has been accomplished by the scientific cooking movement which has spread over the country during recent years, but likely enough it will ultimately result in a simplification of dishes. This gospel of cooking by the light of science does not eliminate the palate-pleasing compounds of the kitchen, as we understand it, Senator regards this condescension as a but seeks to make those dishes wholesome. plied. The frying-pan is cast into the right, pray, have Republicans to be post- fire, but the broiling irons are brought into play to the prolongation of life and the delectation of man. If the thirty immortals of Paris are correctly reported, perhaps science is giving attention to the minds and stomachs of France. Maybe the French have wearled of that kind of cooking which becomes a branch of the prestidigitator's art and are seeking things to eat which are nearer to bread-and-butter simplicity.

AND the snow, it snoweth every day,

PROMPTLY at the opening of the Legislature the stars and stripes were run up over the dome of the Capitol. Why? The stars and stripes are the emblem of the Nation, not of the State. The State Legislature is a purely State function. It is typical of the supremacy of the State for definite purposes within the Nation. Why, then, the national flag should be raised over the sessions of the State Legislature is something to be wondered at. Every man, of course, is a citizen of the United States as well as of his State. But these citizens of the United States and of the State of Indiana, who are elected to the State Legislature, meet there not as citizens, but as State officials, exemplifying the independent exercise of powers that belong to the State If a flag floats over the Capitol only would seem to be the proper symbol. Of course the stars and stripes are in order at all red character of the speils idea in In-lians Congressmen is the fact that Mr. sight above the dome every day of the year. lartin, of the Eleventh district, has in- But there is no special propriety in their being

The controversy as brought out expressions of bitterness an virulence from ecclesiastics and editors of each party against the leaders of the other, which are sure to be regretted. But out of it all the old church will probably emerge with ods and measures more fully in harmony with the spirit of American institutions.

PRESIDENT HARRISON'S order placing al free-delivery postoffices, whatever the number of their carriers and clerks, under the civil service law, is a step in advance for civil service reform. The order is to be compared with that issued by President Cleveland four years ago, relating to the railway mail service. As President Cleveland was criticized four years ago for extending the operation of the law after his defeat, so President Harrison is criticized now. But we are not of the critics in either case. Whenever the civil service idea gets forward we applied, whether the motives controlling its extension are absolutely pure, patriotic, and disinterested or not. Our only ground of criticism of President Harrison in connection with the matter is that he did not issue the order long ago. We have can politicians, now letter-carriers or postal clerks, holding the positions affected by the President's order. Most of them are proba bly efficient officers by this time. If not the beauty of the situation is that their places will not be filled with men of the other party, whose only or chief reommendation is that they are petty politicians. The places must now be filled on rational principles; and competent citizens who would like to enter the public service. whatever their political faith or lack of faith may be, will have the chance to secure place.

Ir may take another week for the stars in the Legislature to swing into place in the firmanent.

THE report of the mileage committee in the State Senate the other day, made a very pleasant episode. Every member receives 10 cents a mile for traveling expenses in coming to the capital and in returning home. Senator Sweeney, who lives at Tell City, travels by such round-about routes that his mileage amounted to $99.60. Naturally he was looked upon with envious eyes by his less fortunate who travel on directer lines or live nearer the State House, and especially by our Marion tor Boyd waggishly proposed that the mileage money be equally divided among the Senators, arguing that such disposition of it would be the fairest, inasmuch every one of them had a railway pass in in reports of the proceedings of a recent his pocket. Harper's Weekly.]

The first New York daily newspaper to issue a Sunday edition was the Herald, and, according to Mr. Robert Bonner, the innovation was due to an accident. One Saturday the Herald's galleys, on which the setup type is held in readiness for making up into pages, were filled with left-over matter which had been crowded out of the Saturday paper, and Mr. Bennett said to his foreman: "Let's get up a Sunday issue. Use the old matter, and put in a few fresh things," This happened shortly before the outbreak of the war, and as the publication of a Sunday newspaper was at that time considered disreputaire, the other dailies did not follow the Herald's example until the beginning of hostilities created an eager demand for news from the front. most important criminal cases in the English courts.

The kangaroo plague has always been a great nuisance to the Australian squatters, for on an average these animals consume as much grass as a sheep. It is stated that, on a sheep ranch of sixty to eighty thousand acres, 10,000 kangaroos were killed annually for six consecutive years, and yet their numbers remained very formidable in the locality. In the colony of south Australia hundreds of thousands of kangaroos are slaughtered annually for their skins and the bonus offered by the authorities. The number of these marsnpials in New South Wales in 1800 was estimated to be over 4,000,000, and yet about 500,000 kangaroos and 670,000 wallables were destroyed in the colony in that year. A bonus of 16 cents for each kangaroo killed is offered in Australia, hence the colonists are gradually exterminating these native animals. Over 500,000 skins are annually shipped to England, and a large number to North America, to be converted into leather.

Against Legislative Extravagance. [South Bend Times.]

THE INDIANAPOLIS NEWS makes a strong appeal to the Legislature to respect the interest of Indiana tax-payers by not employing, at heavy public expense, a larger number of doorkeepers, clerks, etc., than is necessary for the efficient performance of the duties devolving upon such subordinates. The point is well taken, and ought to be heeded. It is an utter impossibility to provide for one-tenth of the individuals seeking these places, so the Legislature might as well disappoint a few more. Public confidence and respect are of infinitely greater value to a political party than the thanks of a horde of place-seekers, for whom the State has no needed or legitimate employment. employment.

[Crawfordsville Journal.] The advent of a thousand place-seekers at Indianapolis moves The News to ery out for a reform in the number and compensation of legislative employes. The demand of The News is not without some basis of justice to the people who pay the taxes. Both the number and compensation taxes. Both the number and compensation of the army of clerks, doorkeepers, messengers, pages and supernumeraries generally could be reduced at least one-half and the work would be more efficiently done. The fact is there are so many of them that they are in each other's way. It is safe to say, however, that it will not be done as the Democracy are not in the reforming business when it comes to the offices which they control themselves.

The New York Store

Four good things served to keep the store busy to-day, and will continue all week:

THE SILK EXHIBIT THE SHOE CLEARANCE THE EMBROIDERY BARGAINS MUSLINUNDERWEARSALE

Three of them are of annual occurrence. The silk exhibit is unique. It is not a sale, although the Natchaug Silks are very low priced at $1 to $2 a yard. They are black, soft and lustrous, and generally desirable. They are better than any other moderatepriced goods that we know of.

The Shoe Clearance is an absolute cleaning-up sale of all broken lines. The pairs are tied together and placed on the bargain tables. The boxes have been burned. We couldn't put the shoes back in stock if we would. They simply have to be sold. They will be-we're not uneasy about that. There was a crowd after them Saturday and to-day. We simply mention them again that you may not let hesitation deprive you of your share.

As we explained Saturday, the Embroidery Sale this year is better for buyers, because of some shrewd buying on our part. There are wide, medium and narrow Edgings and Insertions, all on fine, even Brighter, Better and cloth, fast edge. In a couple of months, when you are paying 50c a yard for black and colored Flouncing, don't blame us because you didn't get some of these we're selling Three nights and THURSDAY, JAN. 12, now for 25c.

There were twenty-two big cases of Muslin Underwear to start the sale with this morning. That means a great lot of goods. Just how long they will last at the prices we've put on them we can't tell, of course-can't tell just exactly how long it will take for people to wake up to the fact that this opportunity only comes once a year. Sale opened all right this morning, but the quality of the gar-ments—their prettiness and the price ought to make an absolute rush. All of the prices are low, but there is a better value probably in the line at 35c and that at $1 than at the other

ALLEGED CHARGES MADE AGAINST CORRIGAN.

Archbishop Ireland Said To Be His Accuser and To Have Sent the Charges to the Pope-No Con-

CHICAGO, January 9 .- The Post publishes CHICAGO, January 9.—The Post publishes a long article containing the starting information that the Most Rev. John Ireland, Archbishop of St. Paul, has preferred formal charges against the Mcst Rev. M. A. Corrigan, archbishop of New York. Archbishop Corrigan is accused of having engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to weaken or undo the effect of the Pope's decision in respect to church matters in America, and of having recourse to methods unbecoming a prelate of the Roman Catholic church, and designed to discredit and disgrace Archbishop signed to discredit and disgrace Archbishop Ireland and Monsignore Satolli, the papal ablegate in America. These charges, duly ablegate in America. These charges, duly formulated, are now on their way to Rome, where they will be presented to the highest tribunal in the Roman Catholic church. That tribunal has power to pass upon the accusations and to fix the punishment of the accusations and to fix the punishment of the accused if they are sustained. The decision will be eagerly awaited, for each of the prelates has been considered as an object of the Pope's favorable regard in respect of the new American cardinalate, which, it is said, will be conferred at the approaching jubilee, and the future-of both prelates will, in all probability, be decided by the result of the tribunal's deliberations. The differences between Archbishop Ireland and Archbishop Corrigan are of long The differences between Archbishop Iraland and Archbishop Corrigan are of long standing, and each has a large following among the hierarchy, priesthood and laity of the church in America, and all these are likely to be more or less affected by the decision.

A portion of the documentary evidence against Archbishop Corrigan has fallen into possession of the Sunday Post. These docupossession of the Sunday Post. These documents, as interpreted by the reverend prelate's accusers, indicate the existence of a conspiracy of which the archiepiscopal residence in New York is the center, and which extends in numerous ramifications throughout America, into France and Italy, and even to the shadow of St. Peter's itself. The evidence that Archbishop Corrigan is the center of a propaganda whose purpose is to discredit Archbishop Ireland and secure the recall of Monsignore Satolei is summed up as follows:

1. Archbishop Corrigan's Philadelphia article.

2. Letters from priests in Archbishop Corrigan's household to various laymen, who have access to the secular press, appealing for help in an anti-Ireland crusade.

3. The publication of an anti-Ireland pamphlet written by Father Gerardo Ferranti, Archbishop Corrigan's Italian secretary, and translated by Monsignore Concilio, of Jersey City.

4. The publication of a similar pamphlet ostensibly by an ecclesiastic at Grenoble. France; but whose authorship has been traced to New York.

to New York.

5. The extraordinary activity of Miss Ides, now resident in Rome, and said to be an agent of Archbishop Corrigan. She is said to have been instrumental in sending numerous cables, which appeared with surprising opportuneness for the Corrigan side of the controversy.

6. The surprising activity of anonymous "anti-Ireland" lay correspondents.

"anti-Ireland" lay correspondents.

Continuing, the article says that upon the arrival of Mons. Satolli it was for a time supposed that the differences between Archbishops Ireland and Corrigan had ended. The friends of Archbishop Ireland felt elated. Then came rumblings of dissent from the Corrigan faction. Anonymous letters, with disagreeable insinuations regarding Mons. Satolli were published in the daily press. The storm of indignation reached a climax when Father McGlynn was restored.

The daily papers in all parts of the coun rry, and especially in New York, gave cir-culation to the most unreserved criticisms and innuendoes, bearing with no light touch upon Archbishep Ireland and Arch-bishop Satolti. Letters of this character bishop Satolti. Letters of this character were printed every day, and a careful obsever might have noted then several coincidences. Among others:

1. Letters expressing very nearly the same sentiment appeared simultaneously in widely-separated cities.

2. The same spirit, an unmistakably anti-Ireland anti-Satolli spirit, ran through all.

Ireland anti-Satolii spirit, ran through all, or very nearly all of them.

3. The letters, though for the most part written by laymen and Loman Catholics, discovered a facility in ecclesiastical matters and a freedom of expression not ordi ters and a freedom of expression not ordi-narily possessed by laymen of intrusted by Roman Catholics to the secular press.

Upon such evidence as this the friends of Mons. Ireland reluctantly, but per-haps not illogically, arrived at the conclu-sion that the Archbishop of St. Paul and Mons. Satolli, "the Papal ablegate, were the targets of a secret, skillful and far-reaching propaganda within their own church.

It was soon learned, so the article says, that Archbishop. Corrigan was sending monymous letters to be published in Chicago, criticising Archbishop Ireland and his views. The letters were dated Philadelphia. To illustrate the spirit of the paper which Archbishop Corrigan sent to a Roman Catholic layman of Chicago, to lave printed anonymously in a Chicago paper: "I say decidedly," the Philadelphia ecclesiastic is represented as saying, "that the English Catholics may have been driven to accept a treacherous, anti-Catholic, unrepublican system, and the Irish may have been beaten into such a system, and the Whole European continent may have been forced to accept a like system, including Prussia and Italy, but American Catholics will accept no such system, and Archbishop Ireland can not system, and Archbishop Ireland can not force it upon them. Mons. Satolli, when he has been here fifty years, and knows the country, will tell Archbishop Ireland then what I tell you now."

No Confirmation Obtainable.

Dispatches from various points give the results of efforts to interview Catholic dignitaries about the above story. Both Archbishop Corrigan and Archbishop Ireland refuse to make any statements whatever. Bishop McQuaid, of Rochester, N. Y., says he does not believe the Y., says he does not believe the atary. Rev. John Conway, editor of the Northwestern Chronicle, who stands nearest Archbishop Ireland of all ecclesiastics in the Northwest, makes a long statement, in which he reflects rather bitterly on Archbishop Corrigan, and acknowledges the existence of the alleged conspiracy, but demies that Ireland has appealed to the Pope, saying that such a step is not necessary, as Monsignore Satolli is in this country for the express purpose of settling such disputes.

McGlynn Will Go To Rome. NEW YORK, January 9 .- Dr. Edward Mc Glynn will go to Rome. This statement is authoritative and bears out the announcement made at the time his suspension was removed by Monsignore Satolli. The visit Fill be made within a few weeks. This indicates that the restoration of his priestly functions by the papal ablegate was in the nature of a compromise.

Dr. Henry Carey, who led the revolt of St. Stephen's church parishioners against Dr. McGlyun's suspension, and who has been his leading supporter ever since, said: "He will not go under disciplinary orders, but in response to an invitation from His Holiness, which is but proper that he should comply with."

The Opposition To Satolli. ROME, January 9. - The Vatican has caused an inquiry to be made into the extent of the opposition to the Satolli mission. A DAILY FASHION NOTE,

The Unconventional Type of Girl and Her Ways of Dress,

The illustration to-day shows the girl who always dresses as she pleases, whose clothes at a given time may be distinctly last year's, or even worse; who does her hair to suit herself, and likes it so, and who wears the shape of hat she conceives to be becoming, and sticks to it through thick and thin. To be sure, on the principle that a stopped clock is right once every day, she is quite the thing once in awhile, but at that time NEW YORK, January 9.—Louise Pomeroy she loses some of her unique charm—for she has charm. She is not dowdy, not a day, after an illness of four days, from bit. She wears what she does evidently because she likes it-not because she is care less or does not know better, but because its pleases her. For instance, she took to wearing her coat collar turned up a long time ago. Of course she has been for some time quite correct, but, dear me, that does not make her like the idea any better, and when we are all wearing turn-down and turn-away things about our throats, she will still make her collar a background for her earnest, handsome face. She will do it without a bit of self-consciousness, too—that is one of her charge. This orl wear her hair always. bit of self-consciousness, too—that is one of her charms. This g.rl wears her hair always sort of loose. Its locks stray with the wind, but somehow it seems just right on her. She usually affects the hat turned up on one side in the good old-fashioned way. It is not handsome, but the flare sets off her fine face. Her face may not be pretty, but it is handsome and earnest and the eyes are nice and direct. May be it is all because she has her own opinion of things and is not afraid to follow them. Of course, this kind of a girl would cease to be fetching if there were more of her. She is like a breath there were more of her. She is like a breath of salt air on the flat lands in the midst of all these girls who sell their individuality for every fickle smirk that fashion makes.

Boston Boy's Eyesight Saved-Perhaps His Life

By Hood's Sarsaparilla-Blood Polsoned by Canker.

Read the following from a grateful mother: "My little boy had Scarlet Fever when 4 years old, and it left him very weak and with blood poisoned with canker. His eyes became so inflamed that his sufferings were intense, and for seven weeks he Could Not Open His Eyes. I took him twice during that time to the Eye and Ear Infirmary on Charles street, but their remedies failed to do him the faintest shadow of good. I commenced giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and it soon cured him. I have never doubted that it saved his sight, even if not his very life. You may use this testimonial in any way you choose. I am always ready to sound the praise of

Hood's Sarsaparilla because of the wonderful good it did my son." ABBIE F. BLACKMAN, 2888 Washington St.,

SOME JANUARY PLUMS From the Fire Sale

-AT THE

Fire never made a greater inroad into a dry tinder-box than has the enormous trade of two fire sales into our Children's Department. We find that we have left from one to four dozen suits each of lots that contained 100 or more a few weeks ago, suits that are of the very latest patterns and, moreover, most popular sellers. We desire to convert them all, and for suits that have been marked $5, $6, $7, $7.50 and $8 we name for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday,

Some of the above were subjected to smoke and some were in transit and have gone into the stock since the last fire. You can make your own selection. You can also get a chance at some $20, $22 and $25 Men's Suits that show the ear-marks of heat at from $5 to $8. With the expenditure of a few shillings they can be made as good as new.

Chicago, January 9.—The annual election of the Board of Trade took place to-day, and there was decidedly more voting going on than anything else. There was one sensation—$19 a barrel for May pork. The visible supply proved a bugbear in the wheat pit till it began to appear that the increase would be much smaller than expected. May opened unchauged at 46%, declined to 46c and rallied to 45%, 64%. The big selling by the Cudahy-Wright combination last week seemed to have its effect at the opening to-day, but the high prices for hogs led to another spurt, while quotations tip to topped any yet reached. May pork within a few moments of the opening was Nic off at $10.42\forall_p, but later advanced to $18.87\forall_901.

Laird's Narrow Escape From Death. There was a peculiar accident near Fowler, Ind., Saturday night, which nearly resulted in the death of John Laird, aged thirty-two, who lives at 150 Lexington avenue. Laird is a fireman on the Chicago division of the Big Four, and his freight train had just left Fowler. While he was stoking the engine the locomotive and ten-der parted and he fell between them, his clothing catching on a projection. engine pulled on ahead when relieved of its train, but the engineer soon discovered what was wrong. Laird was dragged along by the train, his head bumping gainst the ties occasionally, and in his position he rode for about alf a mile without being able to free himself. When the train was stopped the trainmen were surprised to find that he was alive. He was brought home yesterday. He is seriously hurt, but it is thought that he will recover. He has a wife and family.

HINDERED BY BAD WEATHER

COLD AND HEAVY SNOWS INTER-FERING WITH CAR MOVEMENT.

A Falling Off Noticed On Nearly All the Local Lines - Delayed Train Service-Big Four Must Build a Track-Other Railroad News.

The extreme cold weather and the heavy snows have had a bad effect on the car movement of the local lines, and nearly every road shows a falling-off for last week every road shows a falling-off for last week as compared with the corresponding period a year ago. There is also a scarcity of cars and a lack of machinery to handle the trains, and this has added somewhat to the decrease. The frozen highways in Illinois have improved business a little on lines running through that State, however. The train-sheets show the following number of cars handled:

Vandalia, 1,414. Big Four lines: Indian apolis division, 1,279; St. Louis division, 2,893; Cinciunati division, 2,186; Chicago division, 1,160. Pennsylvania lines: Indivision, 1,160. Pennsylvania lines: Indianapolis division, 1,357; Chicago division, 500; Louisville division, 538; Indianapolis & Vincennes, 674; Peoria & Eastern: East end, 840; west end, 840. Lake Erie & Western, 581. Cincinnati, Hamilton & Indianapolis, 545. Indianapolis, Decatur & Western, 378. New Monon, 375. Empty cars, 4,018; total handled, 17,619, against 18,180 last week.

Delayed Train Service.

Since Saturday night the trains on the local roads have been coming in at all kinds of hours and the morning reports for to-day do not show any improvement. Most of the trains are delayed by snow or by wait-ing for connections. Two freight wrecks on the Big Four caused the delay on the Chi-cago division. A freight car loaded with fruit jumped the track at Greensburg. The fruit was scattered around for some distance, but no one was injured. A flange on a freight car broke near Thorntown and a car left the track. The damage was slight, but the road was blockaded for several hours. In consequence of the weather passenger travel is light, though the Union station was crowded with people who were waiting for late trains all day.

Against the Volunteer Relief. A strong fight is to be made against the rolunteer relief fund of the Pennsylvania railroad in the present Legislature. It is to be made principally by organizations on other railroads and insurance companies. A lobby has already arrived to urge legislation against it. Conductor "Nick" Bennett, of the Louisville division, said last evening: "If the members of the Legislature could see some of the homes in which the relief fund has brought plenty, where there would have been want, or talk with some of the widows or orphans the fund has saved from suffering, I don't believe they would try to break it up."

Quick Train Work. The Theodore Thomas Orchestra went to Cincinnati over the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Indianapolis by special train. H. J. Some of the members of the congregation ex-pressed surprise among themselves at the large number of strangers present. The at-tendance had been small for sev-eral preceding weeks, owing to the bad weather, but the weather last bad weather, but the weather last night was not a great improvement. It can hardly be doubted that the large attendance was due to the strange letter which appeared in THE NEWS last Thurs day evening from a despondent person who wished to commit suicide, but first desired to "hear his funeral" preached by the min-

The unique opportunity of hearing an ante-mortem funeral sermon was not to be lost, and many of those at the church list night looked about to catch a glimpse of the prospective corpse. "No one," Dr. Van Anda said, "had the right to disrepect himself, not to value the great soul that was given him by God." Dr. Van Anda preached from the epistle to the Romans, laying especial emphasis on the words, "We glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience; and experience. and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us."

THE WIDOW OF JOSEPH HOLDEN Explains the Unfortunate Mistake Which Has Caused Misunderstanding -C. Kregelo & Whitsett's

WOODSIDE, INDIANAPOLIS, January 9, 1898 Since there has been some controversy about the burial of my husband, Joseph Holden, killed by the cars on December 23, I wish to state a few facts.

Shortly after the fatal accident, Mr. John Texton, representing the Pan-Handle Railroad Company, came to my house and told me that the next morning, after the inquest, the body would be brought home, nicely decessed and in a nice casket, and the burial expenses would all be borne by the railroad company. This was some relief to me, of course.

The body was then in charge of Kregelo & Whitsett.

have an order from me to Kregelo & Whitsett for the body.

Not knowing any better, I gave them the order and they brought the body home on a stretcher and stark naked except a piece of musifa laid over it.

Mr. Caleb Holden, my deceased husband's brother, and my son William then went innocently to Girton & Co.'s to select a casket, and arriving there, were told that the railroad company had decided not to pay the burial expenses and that he must do it himself.

Thinking it true and knowing something must be done, gave his obligation for the bill they made out to him, and which he brought back with him, of $84, not including hearse or carriages to the depot for shipment to his old home.

The railroad company learning of the interference (and bringing to me for the first time Kregelo & Whitsett's representative), came to me, and teiling me how I had been mialed, and of my mistake, I was glad to give back to the company and Kregelo & Whitsett the charge of affairs.

The railroad company telephoned Girton not

I attest the foregoing statement of my mother as true in every particular, as I am known to all the facts, beside having gone with my father's brother to Girton to select the casket, and also went back into the city again to Kregelo & Whitsett's for the second selection; and I wish to add that if my father's brother was not out of the city now he would, as willingly as we, attest all the facts as stated.

I went in with my mother to testify, and had to bring her home without so doing because of her illness.

Last year something over 14,000 barrels of swill were lleeted and sold, and about 18,000 loads of ashes, etc., were collected and deposited on the dumps. The cost was $8,000 for collecting asics, and $6,000 for collecting swill. A revenue of about $3,000 was derived from

The furnace is about one and a half miles

The furnace is about one and a nair miles from the city's geographical center in a vicinity not too remote from habitation to constitute a furnace burning garbage under ordinary conditions a nuisance, and this is avoided by the furnace by two fires, which form its characteristic and distinctive feature. A fire at one end burns the garbage; make and cases nass over a fire at the smoke and gases pass over a fire at the other end and are consumed. At the time of a Herald reporter's call there were eight two-horse cart-lords of garbage on the grate, burning, yet from the top of the iron stack issued only a thin film of white smoke, and no oder whatever was apparent.

issued only a thin film of white smoke, and no odor whatever was apparent.

The crematory is inclosed in a house thirty-five feet long by twenty-five feet wide, made of galvanized corrugated iron. A platform from the street, supported by timbers, leads directly upon the top of the furnace. Teams drive upon the platform, and dump their loads upon 'a chute, made of steel plates which slope toward a number of holes in the top of the furnace. One of the holes is large enough to admit the body of a horse, and whatever the nature of the staterial thrown down it quickly falls or is 'raked into the holes and descends into the nuelstrom of flame passing beneath. The holes are ordinarily covered with fire-clay plates, withdrawn and re-placed by the aid of iron handles. When the apertures are uncovered there is a strong downward draught, and no odor is apparent upon the premises save that from the material as it is dumped. A hose and brush, however, quickly clean off the plat-form, and the rearing fire takes care of all the waste, both liquid and solid.

THE FURNACE.

THE FURNACE.

The furnace itself is of rectangular brick construction, 42 feet long, 9½ feet wide and 12½ feet high, outside measurement, and the stack is 30 feet of brick, 60 feet of iron. At each end of the furnace, on a line with the garbage grates, are fire boxes, and at the stack end are flues into the chimney, closed by heavy fire-clay slabs. The interior walls are lined with heavy fire-clay blocks, accurately fitted together, backed on the outside by a heavy brick wall, braced and bonded together with stays, rods and angle irons. The furnace being charged, the fires are lighted first at the front and afterward at the rear end. The flames from the first fire pass over and through the mass of garbage piled-upon the grates, driving the smoke and gases into and across the second fire, where they are consumed. The flames from the second fire are, by the action of a strong draught, brought back underneath the garbage grates, intensely heating the mass from below. When liquids are to be destroyed, a part of this heat and flame is directed under the hearth or pan, and all the contents are quickly evaporated, and burned. All the odors, gases and products of combustion are passed through one or the other of the fires, there being no escape except across the fire-boxes. The ashes, as they fall through the gate, are raked out of the other of the fire-boxes. The ashes, as they fall through the grate, are raked out of a range of doors on the side, and from time-to time, as required, the garbage is stirred up and distributed over the grates by bars thrust through an upper range of stoke doors.

The terms of the contract for this furnace

The terms of the contract for this furnace require a capacity of seventy cubic yards per day of twenty-four hours, equivalent to about thirty tons, which is twice or three times the estimated requirements of the city at the present time. To operate it requires one to one and a half tons of coal per day and two men. The amount of fuel required depends somewhat upon the character of the material to be destroyed. The body of a horse is consumed in about an hour. There is an offset more or less important in the ashes. The process of destruction yields about 5 per cent. of ashes, and about 5 to 8 per cent. of the ashes is potash. When screened and separated from broken glass, tin cans, etc., the residue is worth about the same as Canada wood ashes, or about $24 per ton. In some places the value of the ashes nearly defrays the cost of fuel, but in Lowell, where animal refuser is hought by fertilizer and soap manufacturers, the value of the ashes will not be as great.

nacturers, the value of the ashes will not be as great.

VERY CRUDE METHODS.

The history of the solution of the proper method of disposing of garbage in Lowell is an evolutionary record of the growth of sanitary knowledge in the community, and the difficulties met and surmounted are typical, probably, of most all New England cities. Ten years ago, when the haphazard method of disposing of swill to collectors who could make use of it, had involved so much of offense that it could no longer be borne, it was proposed in the City Councit to establish a municipal piggery at the city farm, collect the swill and raise swine to offset the expense. For a few months it was a burning question. It was discussed in the meetings of the City Council, and newspapers and committees jihaketed from place to place to get information about city piggeries. The general conclusions arrived at was that the piggeries were not successful financially. The sanitary issue was raised, but not vary strongly insisted upon. Many of the evils new known to be connected with such a system had not then been deminarizated. Finally, instead of a city piggery, the sidest of collecting the city swill and of selling it to farmers was proposed and adopted. It has since been carried on with uniformly baleful results.

A city swill-house necessitated municipal collection of the stuff. Here an improvement was made. Tight carts were nearided.

and collections were made regularly and as frequently as practicable. In time also, purchasers were compelled to convey the swill away from the city in tight casks provided by the health department. The city undertook to make collections from private houses only; leaving the refuse of hofels and boarding-houses to be collected by men who were licensed by the board of health. Cleanliness, so far as practicable, was inwho were licensed by the board of health. Cleanliness, so far as practicable, was insisted upon and secured. By reason of the larger quantity available at such places, collections could be made frequently, and before offense was created. It was impracticable, however, to make collections from private houses often enough to prevent decomposition. The consequence was that the swill collected by the city, besides being offensive from its disgustingly heterogenous character, became still more offensive by reason of fermentation. For the last six to ten years the stuff sold to farmers by the city as swill has been an aggregation of nastiness that would shock any one whose sense of decency had not been blunted by association. In 1838 the city sold 11,296 barrels of it; in 1889, 19,756 barrels; 1890, 12,152 barrels; 1891, 14,552 barrels.

WHAT WAS DONE WITH SWILL.

WHAT WAS DONE WITH SWILL.

The understanding between seller and purchaser was that the swill should be fed to awine only. It was unfit even for such food. The investigations of Dr. Mark in Boston several years ago traced the origin of trichinosis to swine fed upon city swill. But good faith on the part of purchasers was an exception rather than the rule. There was profit to a rich producer in feeding swill to cows, and it was extensively done. Epidemios of cholera infantum have been frequent in the city, especially in districts where the people cholera infantum have been frequent in the city, especially in districts where the people had not ice or proper means of preserving milk. They were traced to swill milk so positively as to leave no room for doubt on the point that the city's swill system was directly responsible for the great rate of mortality among the infants. Chiefly through the efforts of the Lowell Board of Health the Legislature in 1889 research law send everything to the crematory. The agent of another corporation is now negotiating with the board of health to a similar end, and it is probably only a question of time when all will do so. This is an exceedingly important factor, because if carried out as indicated the entire swill system of the city will be stamped out. The board of health has felt that it would handle only a portion of the problem at once. After successfully taking care of private-house offal, it would attack the co-operative boarding-house system of swill delivery. But the action of the agents unexpectedly assists in abating the nuisance at once. It illustrates what the board of health has observed as a most important effect in other cities. With a crematory in operation, people come to feel Now, commencing at the bottom, place good-sized pine and hemiock branches on the ground against the poles, with the stem of the branch up. Of course, you have placed the poles close enough together to prevent the branches from falling through. Keep on thatching with the branches, using smaller ones as you near the top. If this shelter is made with a little care, being sure to place the growing ends of the branches down, you will find it a warm, dry and very snug shelter, such as you will surely enjoy better than any canvas tent, provided you are a born woodsman. crematory in operation, people come to feel that it is easier to get rid of waste by giving it to the city teams than by surreptitiously hiding it in an ash barrel, throwing it on

You should never sleep on the ground if you can help it. A most comfortable bed can be made with pine or hemlock boughs, using small boughs for the lower layers and the soft ends for the top. Be careful in this to commence at the head of your bed, place the stems of the boughs pointing away from the head, and be sare that every stem is covered by the soft end of the next bough; the thicker this mattress is made the more delicitful it is, and a very little.

bough; the thicker this mattress is made the more delightful it is, and a very little bedding makes you warm enough. In winter a stove is a necessity, and one that you can cook upon is to be preferred. I must qualify what I just said about a stove being a necessity, for I have slept out in a brush shelter a week at a time in the mountains of Montana when the snow wa deep and the cold intense. But then w did not entirely close our hemlock "wickey up," as the Indians call it, but left it partly open to admit the warmth of a great fire in front of it that was built up every time ciealiness which, perhaps, formerly excited no notice or remark.

The work of a crematory in Savannah, Ga., during eleven months of 1892, gives an interesting idea of what the garbage of a city of 65,000 inhabitants consists, and of its quantity. During the time mentioned there were burned 15,473 loads of garbage. of 41,271 cubic yards; 611 loads of night-soil, equaling 3,675 cubic yards; 49 cows, 45 horses, 43 goats, 623 dogs, 1,100 cats, 73 barrels of fish, 71 barrels of onions, 38 barrels of apples, 19,607 pounds of meat, 6,742 head of poultry, 8 loads of oranges, 28 loads of bananas, 13 loads of cocoanuts, 1 load of apples, 10 and of peaches, 18 loads of peanuts, 18 loads of potatoes, 1 load of tongues, 1,370 dozen eggs, 6 snakes, a monkey, rabbit and sheep, and 242 pieces of infected goods. This made a mass of 46,000 cubic yards destroyed, at an average expense of 13 cents per cubic yard. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]

The cold weather red nose is a source of great annoyance to many ladies. It looks bad, but should not be confounded with the drinker's nose. In Vienna the cold weather kind is called the "coachman's nose," because the jehus are the ones who have the affection chronically. It is caused by the minute blood vessels in the feature becoming congested and refusing to remove the fluid properly. Two things should be done by the ladies if they wish to prevent the troublesome decoration. First, before going out, they should rub some non-conducting lotion, like cold cream, on the nose. This need not be in quantity, but just sufficient to fill the pores of the skin. Afterward the powder puff may be applied if desired. The second precaution necessary is the wearing of a veil. A veil keeps in the heat of the breath and serves to warm the whole face, nose included.

work, mark out the size of the bottom of the tent on the ground, and drive a tent pin in at each corner; then dig two holes three inches deep, one at the point where the front pole will be and the other where the rear one will rest; hook the lower corners of one side of the tent over two of the pins already driven, then lay the tent on its side so that the ends of the poles will be on the edges of the holes that have been made on the front and back lines;

now station yourselves on the side opposite that on which you have the two-tent corners pinned, and, taking hold of the tent-guys on the upper side, pull it up into position, pin the bottom and guys, taking care that the tent-door is tied so that the sides will not be pinned so far apart that the door can not meet.

Most tent-poles are too long, and the pole holes I have advised permit them to sink down sufficiently to let the sides of the tent rest on the ground.

With a round tent, mark a circle the same size as the bottom of the tent, pin the bottom to the ground all around on the line of this circle. Then raise the tent from the inside and fix the guys.

If you have no tent, a very good substitute can be made from a wagon cover. Cut a ridge pole and support it on two shorter poles at each end, lashed together in the form of a "V," and over this structure draw the wagon cover; and, if you will also place thin sticks at right angles across the ridge pole, like wagon bows, you will have a very good tent indeed.

Failing any canvas, a very comfortable shelter can be made out of hemlock or pine branches. The best way, although there are many, is to select a small tree, cut off the lower branches as far as you can reach from the ground, take some poles, as many as you please, but all twice as long as the distance from the ground the last branch you cut off, which should be cut off about a

I remember once being out in the mountains when it was so cold that animals froze to death standing. That night we slept without a ten or even a brush shelter. The snow was deep, and we took advantage of it and got our shelter from it. We built a great fire alongside a fallen tree, and it soon melted the snow under it and around it, hollowing out a sort of room in which, after the fire went down, we made our beds on some pine boughs. With a little fire at our feet, we slept in comfort in our snow berth, never supposing for an instant that the thermometer was between sixty and seventy degrees below zero.

THE DAY OF "ST. JACKSON." ocracy's Patron Saint and the

Yesterday was a holiday of obligation for the faithful of the Democracy. It was "St. Jackson's" Day. Judging by his pictures, which adorned the old two-cent postage stamp, he was a fearless, firm and friendly man. He wore his hair a la pompadour, and kept his lips set resolutely. In many respects St. Jackson is held to be more the typical American than any man who has held public place. Jackson early became a soldier in the Revolutionary armies, then a prisoner, then an orphan, and not even then discouraged, he became a lawyer. Because he was a good lawyer, he made money, and at middle age purchased a boautiful place near Nashville, which he called "The Hermitage." On this land to-day is the famous Hermitage Stud, said to be the finest stock farm in the world. But before becoming very opulent, St. Jackson performed the feat for which he has been canonized.

On January 8, 1815, in the battle of New Orleans, he sent every red-coated soldier flying to the gulf. On that day he twisted the tail and tweaked the shout of the British lion and drove him for all time to come from the land he was trying to control. And that is why yesterday so many asked for the "J" volume of the encyclopedia at the Public Library, and why so many fancy suppers were given and eaten Saturday night. The two administrations of St. Jackson as chief officer of the Nation, his own uncompromising principles and his unimpeachable integrity helped to form that new Democracy that, after a quarter of a century of defeat, was able to give vectories power. The Deafter a quarter of a century of defeat, was able to gain executive power. The De-mocracy of Jackson and Jefferson—Jeffer-sonian democracy, Jacksonian simplicity— are claimed as the principles of the party, and that is why St. Jackson's Day was a holiday of obligation this year, Hotel Men In Demand In Chicago. William Holt, who has been one of the chief clerks of the Bates House for ten rears, will go to the Palmer House, Chicago, February 1, to become one of the chief clerks there. A flattering inducement was held out to Mr. Reibold, proprietor of the Bates, to go to Chicago and take the management of the Palmer, but he refused to leave the Bates, which he has given a reputation that extends all over the country. It is said that Mr. Palmer offered to write Mr. Reibold a check for the Bates, and placed at his disposal any sum of money he might name to be used in improving the Palmer, if he would come to Chicago.

The Coroner Investigating. Coroner Beck is investigating the death of Lena Nydam, aged sixty, who lived at the corner of Prospect and Oborn streets. She was found unconscious at the feet of the stairs in her home, Thursday afternoon, by neighbors. She never regained consciousness. It is supposed that she fell down the stairs, and Dr. Jeffries, who at-tended her, gives the sause of her death to the health office as from a fracture of the skull. There is little ground for belief in foul play.

Meeting of Indiana Florists. A call has been issued for a meeting of the Indiana florists and others who are interested in flower culture to be held at the Denison House next Thursday. The purpose is to discuss the idea of holding another chrysanthemum show. It is an-nounced that a crisis has arisen in the his-tory of the society, and its success now depends upon the work of the individual Leach and the Firemen's Pension Fund. There is some dissatisfaction among the friends of Eb Leach, of fire headquarters, over the result of the election of trustees of the firemen's pension fund. It is claimed that he had a sufficient number of votes to elect him, but that he was counted out. His friends propose to make a canvass of the companies to verify the vote.
